Bradley Elementary invited parents to explore innovative learning with their children on Tuesday morning.

The 5th-grade class took their parents around to different interactive stations where parents were able to assist their child with fun learning experiences.

Miss Reeves, the 5th-grade teacher, said this day allows parents to see what their child has been learning throughout the year.

"The students are trained on how to use all of this technology so I turn them into the teachers so they teach the parents on how to do this stuff," said Ms. Reeves.

The students and parents were able to use technology, interact with robots, and create art during this event.
