CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Secretary of State Mac Warner said his office hopes there are at least 100 voter registration drives next month during National Voter Registration Month.

Warner said in a news release that everyone should check their voter registration and make sure their voter information is correct.

Any group interested in hosting a voter registration drive can submit a form to the secretary of state's office. The National Voter Registration Day project provides access to promotional support and materials including an organizer's toolkit, posters and social media graphics.
